

Fact Sheet: Government deposit guarantee

How are deposits at Australian credit union protected?

- Australia has one of the strongest banking systems in the world. You can have confidence that all Australian banking institutions including Credit Union SA, must meet the toughest regulatory standards and protections, designed to protect you.

What is the Financial Claims Scheme (the deposit guarantee)?

- All credit unions in Australia meet exceptional high standards and rules set by the Australian Prudential Regulation Authority (APRA). APRA also administers the Financial Claims Scheme, which is an additional protection for deposits.
- The Financial Claims Scheme ensures that depositors with credit unions, banks and building societies will be guaranteed repayment of their funds in the extremely unlikely event that any banking institution fails. The Scheme includes a guarantee of $250,000 per person per institution. Existing deposits in place at 10th September 2011 have a continuing $1 million guarantee until December 2012.

Why has the Financial Claims Scheme cap changed?

- The initial $1 million cap for the Financial Claims Scheme was an emergency response to the global financial crisis. It was introduced in 2008 for three years.
- Australia has one of the strongest banking sectors in the world and the Government has decided this emergency response is no longer required, given our system's clear strength.
- The new cap brings Australia into line with similar guarantee schemes overseas.

How does this affect my deposits?

- The Scheme applies in exactly the same way to all credit unions. From 1 February 2012, deposits will benefit from the $250,000 guarantee.
- There are transitional arrangements in place for all term deposits made prior to 10th September, and new deposits between 10th September and 1 February 2012.

Strict Australian regulation protects your deposits with mutuals

- Credit unions meet the same strict standards as banks, under the Banking Act with strict oversight by APRA. APRA's rules on safety and capital apply to all credit unions to the same high standards.
- As mutuals, we are owned by our members. Our focus is on your interests, and we are conservative and careful managers of our members' money.
- Credit unions have the highest level of capital in the banking system providing exceptional stability. Collectively, mutuals have combined assets over $80 billion, and over 4.5 million Australians as members.
